

History Maker Baseball 1979 Nippon Professional Baseball Season

Welcome to my interpretation of the 1979 NPB Season for History Maker Baseball. In this file, you should find all 6 Central League and all 6 Pacific League teams that made up the 1979 Season, with lineup cards and stadium/logo cards for each team. In 1979 (as today), the Pacific League used a DH, while the Central League did not.

The 1979 season was one of the first seasons past seasons I learned about, at first mostly because it was the first Nippon Series won by my favorite team the Hiroshima Toyo Carp. As I learned more, there is a lot of lore surrounding this season, both on and off the field.

The off-field interest started as early as January as heralded rookie pitcher Suguru Egawa's saga to join NPB finally came to an end. After being drafted by a few different teams, and various administrative issues, finally Egawa got what he wanted what he wanted most: to play for the Yomiuri Giants. Officially, he was signed by the Hanshin Tigers and immediately traded for Giants pitcher Shigeru Kobayashi who would immediately become the Tigers ace pitcher in '79. The events that led to this were so strange and confusing that it caused the NPB Commissioner, Akira Kaneko, to resign.

This was also the first season of the Seibu Lions. The Lions franchise were arguably the most affected by the game-fixing scandal in the late 1960's, and their original owner, Nishitetsu, sold the team in short order. After being a laughing stock with multiple owners, and some ridiculous uniforms, for most of the 70's, the team was sold to Seibu in late-1978. The new owners would go on to invest heavily in the team, and within 3 years would win the Nippon Series. This was the start of that journey.

On the field in the Central League, the pennant race was fought closely between Chunichi, Hanshin and Hiroshima until about late-August. The Carp went on a 20-4-3 run from late August to early October to take control of the race and finish 6 games over the surprising Taiyo Whales, who had their own late season streak to have one of the franchises best finishes in history.

The Pacific League used a split season format with the Kintetsu Buffaloes edging out the Hankyu Braves by 1 game late in the half. Hankyu dominated the 2nd half of the season, but again a late charge from Kintetsu made the race tight. This time, however, Hankyu held on to win by 2 games. This led to a best-of-5 playoff between the teams. Kintetsu swept the series to win the Pacific League for the first time in history.

This led to a Nippon Series where both teams were looking for their maiden win, the first time that had happened since 1962. The Carp had previously gone to the series 4 seasons previous but ran into a dynasty in the making, losing 4-0-2 to Hankyu. This was Kintetsu's first visit to the Nippon Series. What followed was a classic Series that didn't end until the final inning of Game 7. Down a run in the bottom of the 9th, Kintetsu loaded the bases with no one out against Central League MVP Yutaka Enatsu. Pinch hitter Kyosuke Sasaki struck out, right after hitting a ground ball barely foul that probably would have won the series. This brought up Shigeru Ishiwata. With 1 strike on him, he attempted to squeeze bunt. In one of the most famous plays in NPB history, Enatsu pitched the ball high, the bunt was missed and the runner on 3rd, Shiro Fujise, was caught in a run down and tagged out. Enatsu then struck out Ishiwata to clinch Hiroshima's first Nippon Series win of what would become 3 in 6 seasons. Kintetsu would never win a Nippon Series.

Rules about ties: one thing very different about Japanese baseball from MLB is that ties can happen. The rules in 1979 stated that a tie happens when the score is tied and the 9th inning or later is completed in 3 hours or more. This led to a higher amount of ties than a typical season. If you want to simulate this, my suggestion would be to roll a decider die after the 9th inning of a tied game. If a bullet, then move to the 10th. If not, then end the game for a tie. After the 10th, roll one of the regular d6 and a decider die. If result is anything other than a 1 and dot on decider die, consider it a tie. Redo after every inning where the game is still tied.

About the data used for the cards: most of the player data comes from the 2689web.com site, an (unofficial) overall site for Japanese Professional Baseball statistics, box scores and other information. Advanced statistics for fielding and lineups come from the RCAA blog at <https://ranzankeikoku.blog.fc2.com/>. The logos were taken from the Nippon Professional Baseball Uniform Chronical, a set of 3 books that (as the name would imply) go through the history of uniform designs for Japanese professional teams, but also has a section on historical logos.
